

School Introduction

A School That Raises Children Through Connections

Promoting Success By Interacting With Society

This school's objective is to help students develop responsibility and self-worth by promoting success through cooperation. Social interactions at school, in addition to the school subjects taught in the classroom, provide valuable experience to the students.

The students are the main characters of the school and are encouraged to build various connections. Exchanges between classmates, activities in the community and interactions with other schools lead to developing a sense of self. We also strive to raise individuals that will have a positive impact on society.

A Subject-Centered Curriculum Model School

Our school is divided into classrooms for each subject and all of the homeroom classrooms are organized around an activity space called "Kaze no Hiroba." Educational activities and work are displayed throughout the whole school making the best use of this architecture. Our school is an exploration into an abundance of learning and interaction between grades.

Networking and Experience

We take care of students' learning records and experiences. We are studying the use of the open area and its impact on independent working and learning styles.

Individual Advancement Opportunities

The school connects all grades and levels of students by holding activities in the "Kaze no Hiroba."

Constructing Partnerships With The Community

We deepen educational activities by cooperating with the local area and PTA using an internship-style partnership with the elementary school in addition to holding events with other junior high schools.
